

Chirayu
de
class: VII

A story of A boy named Responsible Rammi

Responsible ~~was~~ Rammi was a 12-year old boy from Andhra Pradesh. He lived with his parents, Raju, Nalini, and his five years old sister name. Riya. Rammi attended the local school and was known for his exceptional responsibility and kindness.

One sunny day, while Rammi was playing cricket with his friends, the village headman, Suresh, announced that a ~~sure~~ cyclone warning had been issued for their area. The villagers were advised to evacuate immediately and move to safe areas. Rammi's parents were busy for preparing for their evacuation, packing ~~an~~ essential items like, food, water, and first aid kits. However, Riya was scared and didn't want leave her home.

Without hesitation, Rammi took charge of the situation. He calmly explained to Riya that they had to leave to stay safe, and helped her pack a small bag with her favorite ~~cloth~~ toys and cloth.

"Riya we need to go now" Rammi said said.

Gently holding her "The cyclone is coming, and we don't want to get hurt."

Riya looked up at Rammi with tears in eyes, but he looked at her with a smile "Don't worry # I'll be with you all the time"

As they evacuated Rami held Riya's hand and made sure she was safe throughout the journey. He also helped his parents carry their belongings and assisted other villagers who needed help.

The villagers were evacuated to a nearby school building, which was converted into temporary shelter. Rami helped his family settle in and then went around to check ~~around~~ on the other villagers. Next day when the cyclone had gone, all the villagers returned their homes.

The villagers were impressed by Rami's initiative and ~~responsibility~~ ^{responsibility}. They praised him for his kindness and selflessness, and his parents beamed with pride. From that day, Rami was known as 'Responsible Rami' ~~a role model~~.
A example of the ^{power of kindness,} ~~power of kindness~~ 'compassion and responsibility'.